

Key Perspectives

The Teacher Development Program of KEYS Grade School
2008 Summer Module No. 1

For elementary and preschool teachers, parents, administrators, specialists...

Unleashing the Power in the Latest and Greatest of Children's Literature

April 28, Monday, at 8:30 am to 4:30 pm, Keys Campus

When teachers know books well, they can unleash and spread a passion for reading within their students, as well as show young learners how to use good books to strengthen their writing.

This workshop will introduce participants to some of the best and most recent in children's literature. Participants will learn more about the various components of Balanced Literacy, including Interactive Read Aloud with Accountable Talk, Shared Reading, and Writer's Workshop. They will also have a chance to hear about the latest work being done in the New York City Public School system, by Columbia University's Reading and Writing Project to help students improve their knowledge of genres and application of skills and strategies in both Reading and Writing Workshops.

Facilitator:

Maggie Moon

Maggie Moon has been part of the Reading and Writing Project for six years and served as a Senior Staff Developer. She has a Bachelor's degree in English and Comparative Literature from University of Michigan, Ann Arbor and a Master's degree in Education (K-6) from Teachers College, Columbia University. She is currently co-authoring books on Literacy Coaching with Lucy Calkins, to be published in 2008 by Heinemann.

Fee: ₱ 2,250.00, which includes: handouts, art materials, and 2 snacks.

Limited slots available. Please call to reserve a slot. Discounts apply to groups.

For more information, please contact Wena, Joe, Leah, or Didi:
Tel.: 7234979 Telefax: 7279357

www.keysgradeschool.com